

I do not think that the FCC should implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. The Indiana Telephone Privacy law is an extremely important law that has shown immediate remedy for telemarketing calls. Indiana protects us from receiving these calls. My phone calls from telemarketers have went from around 20 calls per week (considering there were 5 people in the household) to maybe one call every two weeks (charities and newspapers). This privacy law has decreased my time on the phone to unwanted callers. It has also decreased my frustration with answering the phone to these unwanted calls and having to fight with them to take my name off their list. Please do not pass any laws that would lessen the Indiana Telephone Privacy Law. Thank you for your time.
